

The Commodores Drum and Bugle Corps are both excited and proud to announce their 2010 production "Communication"

Communication is a process of transferring information from one entity to another. Watch as the aesthetics of music and dance impart a telling story along the timeline of communication.

See how the evolution of communication has been developed and mastered by mankind into the media types. From early day paper boys calling, "Read all about it" to Morse code, telephone, radio, TV and finally the internet.

The Corps will demonstrate the very soul of communication using signs, symbols, physical contact and posture. Enhancing the dynamics of the production with rhythm, intonation and tempo, the Commodores will produce a fast paced, high energy illustration that will elevate the Corps to the next level.

Corps Director Karen Muskett was quoted "The Commodores have along and proud history of producing entertaining productions for our audience, this year the opportunities available to our technical writers are immense. I am excited to lead our organisation forward with what promises to be a very successful year for our Corps".
